Director John Carr
Starring Vince Barbi and Michael Christian

A group of young survivalist students are clustered among the rocks of a wilderness area, listening to the cautionary teachings of their instructor (Steve Oliver). On a trail just below them, a black Mercedes-Benz sedan rolls up. Four well-dressed men clamber out of the car, armed with shotgun and pistols. Opening the trunk, they roughly drag out Sonny (Michael Christian). Wrists bound, they prop him into a sitting position against a boulder. Sonny pleads for his life to the group's boss, Don Vito (Vincent Barbi), to no avail. As the youngsters gape in frightened disbelief, the hoods summarily execute Sonny with a bullet to his head. One of the girls' screams, and the mobsters, knowing they've been made, start after them. Joey (Joseph Marina) blasts the instructor dead with his shotgun. Panicked, the youngsters flee into the woods. By nightfall, they regain their composure and plot a war to survive. The predators become the prey, no match in their silk suits and designer shoes against a vengeful band determined to wipe them out by primitive means.

Abused and dominated by men in her youth, Belle Starr now out-rides, out-smokes, out-shoots, and out-gambles them as she makes her way around the Old West, usually wearing male garb. One man who's her equal is Larry Blackie with whom she has an on-again, off-again relationship, which is often argumentative and sometimes violent. Together they become involved in a robbery, which goes awry. Belle has to rescue Larry and though he's grateful, he not wants to go his own way.
